Blue Around the Head

The color of your Head aura is an indicator of the energy of your mind, or your mental activity. Blue in your Head aura suggests a tranquil mental state. You are calm and kind, and you are happiest when helping others. You extend caring and compassion to those in need. At times, you may be reluctant to voice your concerns and choose, instead, to take refuge in fantasy.

Blue in the Center

The color that emanates from your Center aura indicates your basic nature, your personality at its deep level. Blue in your Center aura indicates that you are tranquil and sensitive. You speak from your heart with inner self-confidence and security; your words are peaceful and healing. You may have a tendency to internalize the unhappiness and pain of others.

Blue on the Bottom

Your Bottom aura's color reflects the nature of your foundation, your grounding. Blue in your Bottom aura indicates that your foundation is peaceful and truthful. You have a gentle and sensitive nature. You enjoy superior communication skills and you love a good conversation. You may, at times, feel isolated or abandoned; this may be caused by lack of energy.

The color of your Left aura suggests the nature of the energy that flows into you. Blue on the left indicates that peace and caring are coming into your life. You attract others who benefit from your healing presence and outlook on life. You have a strong sense of loyalty. At times, your thinking becomes muddled, forcing you to withdraw from others.

Blue on the Right

The color of your Right aura indicates the energy you express, the energy that others feel coming from you. Blue on the right suggests that others experience your energy as calm and cool. You demonstrate inner certainty and self-confidence. You are a calm focal point in any group. Blue indicates an ability to teach others, to communicate ideas and concepts. There are times, however, when you feel insecure or unhappy, perhaps because your energy is too low.

BLUE PERSONALITIES

These qualities and characteristics are associated with Blue personalities:

Sphere	Description
Purpose	To serve mankind and show us how to love one another Inner drive: the peace and harmony within; give and receive love and support Measure of success: The amount of care and compassion you can share

Emotional	Most emotional of all personalities; loving, caring and patient; compassionate Interaction: Soft-spoken, personal and intimate, harmonious Relationships: Supportive, giving; family oriented; relationship builder Intimacy: Need a deep emotional bond with partner
Abilities	Help and care for others, give of yourself; a rescuer Careers: Nurse, homemaker, astrologer, family therapist, clergy, welfare worker, caretaker, personal assistant
Revitalize	Peaceful personal time, meditation and prayer, visits to spiritual places

MIND/BODY

Blues are the most caring, nurturing and protective of the personalities. They live from their hearts and their emotions. Their life purpose is to serve, help and love others. They teach humanity that without love, nothing else matters. Blues are on this planet to serve mankind.

The honest Blue personality expresses surrender, devotion, dedication to humanity, and high values. Blues are friendly and loving, with open hearts; they need time for themselves to maintain this center of peace.

Their motivation is to serve and help others in a spirit of love and affection. They process ideas and concepts based on feelings and intuition rather than from a mental point of view. As a result, Blues may not feel in their element in highly intellectual discussions.

Intuition and emotional behavior may not be accepted as readily as intellectual thinking or scientific fact, but for Blue personalities, there are no real facts except those which come from their heart and soul.

Blues have a natural inner knowledge and wisdom. They feel and know things without needing facts or data for substantiation. The moment they become still inside, they tune into an inner voice that guides them. They are very empathic, feeling the emotions and thoughts of others. Their challenge is to protect themselves so they do not take on the feelings of those around them.

Blues are the most emotional of all the color personalities and constantly need to clear and center themselves. It can be helpful for Blues to talk with friends about their inner path, write in a journal or just be quiet so their intense emotions can subside.

Some Blues are more concerned about others than about themselves. They are born caretakers and mothers. They remember birthdays, care for those who are sick and always have a shoulder for others to cry on. They are born advisers, counselors, and practitioners. Many people enjoy being with Blues because they express so much love, acceptance and forgiveness.

Blues cry easily, releasing powerful emotions of joy, sorrow, compassion and humility. The other color personalities often have a challenge understanding the intense emotional body of Blue personalities. This emotional depth, however, gives them the ability to be warm, compassionate and protective towards others.

The major gifts of Blues are their ability to express unconditional love, their powerful intuition, and their "inner knowledge." No matter what happens, Blues will always forgive. Others might see them as "too nice" and may take advantage. Therefore, they must stand up for themselves in all situations and not allow others to abuse them.

Blues usually accept the authority of others without offering any resistance. Non-violence is their motto. Their challenge is to discern carefully, staying in their power, and to actually say "No," when appropriate. It is essential that they honor themselves first. If they allow themselves to be used and taken advantage of, they may feel frustrated, depressed and hopeless.

Some Blues are focused primarily on the concerns of others. They enjoy listening to their challenges, having the capacity to understand and not judge what they are going through. Because they spend so much time with the interests of others, they sometimes forget to care for their own. The most important challenge for Blues is to spend more time working on their own personal growth and less time helping those around them.

Some Blues fear that if they try to make their life must come first, others might push them away, reject them or no longer love them. Their fear of hurting others is a reflection of their own fears of being hurt. They need to recognize the tremendous benefits of self-love and to understand that "no" does not mean, "I don't love you." They need to define their boundaries with other people, as they have a tendency to allow friends and even strangers to come into their energy field without putting up adequate protection.

Sometimes Blues take on the energies and qualities of others. This may be especially likely to happen while they are helping and nurturing others in the capacity of caretakers, and it can occur to the point where they actually take on their sicknesses or issues.

The challenge for Blue personalities is to recognize and accept that they are loved. Because they are very sensitive, they are easily hurt. They want to feel accepted and may do anything to receive a small amount of attention or affection.

Blues are precise and clear in their thinking. From a mental standpoint they are usually in a peaceful and calm state of mind. They focus more on their feelings and emotions than on their thoughts. It is a task for them to formulate their perceptions into detailed analytical communication.

Blues usually do not like physical activity or work. For these sensitive beings, the physical world often seems loud, brutal and harsh. They prefer to reside in their own emotional and spiritual world. They enjoy casual sports or activities they can practice with friends and family. These would include walking, water activities and simple games. Because they are not very physically active and because Blue is the color of expansion, they may easily gain weight.

If Blues are not living in harmony, they can be dramatic and consuming, constantly looking for someone or something to love. They may see themselves as victims being manipulated and they can be filled with self-pity. At times, they may feel they must love in order to feel worthy and to be loved in return, which puts conditions on their love.

Unbalanced Blue personalities lack self-confidence and may experience feelings of worthlessness, questioning if they are truly worthy. If they are told they are loved a hundred times and criticized for something one time, they will remember the criticism. They may consider themselves responsible for mistakes that did not involve them, taking matters personally and excusing themselves a thousand times.

Blues are very spiritual beings. They believe in a Higher Power in the universe. God, prayer and religion play an important role in their lives. They could not exist without spirituality and their belief that their purpose in life is aligned with it. For them, Spirituality means living every day in tune with their inner guidance and intuition. This is their truth and this is how they are capable of great love and compassion. They have tremendous faith and trust in God. In challenging and intense times, they are able to connect with their powerful inner source so they can continue to help and support others.

SOCIAL LIFE

Blues enjoy being around people. They are very social, always concerned about the needs of others. Blues are found in all areas of society where service and support are needed. For them, no task seems too much if it is enjoyed and appreciated. It's their outlet for their powerful love and compassion.

Blues have lifelong friends. Even when they don't often have close physical contact, they are powerfully connected to those they love. They communicate their love and appreciation on all levels, including the more conventional ones like writing and talking on the phone.

Blues express the feminine or nurturing Mother Nature. They balance the active masculine aspect, helping us to integrate both energies in our society and within each of us.

RELATIONSHIPS AND INTIMACY

Living in healthy, harmonious relationships is essential for Blues. They want to love and to be loved. Blues make wonderful mates because they love to take care of and support their loved ones. They create a happy and harmonious lifestyle with their family at the heart. They may expect their partner to return their love as powerfully and freely as it is given, and to be as supportive and caring. They may find it hard to accept that other personalities might not understand the strong emotional depth they possess and may have different emotional and mental behaviors.

Blues want to be married and to live in solid family relationships. Love and affection are more important to them than sex and passion. Kissing, cuddling and feeling emotional love of their partner may be more important than sexual excitement and stimulation. Sex is a deep, emotional and spiritual experience that creates a powerful bond with their partners, who they often consider to be soul mates.

Blues are loyal and monogamous. Their test is to be aware that if they are too emotionally demanding with their partner, they might push them away. In disharmonious relationships, they have difficulty letting go and remaining independent. In fact, some relationships may seriously challenge Blues to let go.

Blues love the strength of Deep-Reds, the security of Orange-Yellows and the independence of Deep-Greens. They must insure that they are not being used and that their relationships are based on sensitivity and love.

Oranges and Blues are the opposite side of the spectrum and therefore can learn a great deal from each other. Blues can be too emotional with other Blues to the extent that neither one has the power to lead and inspire. Blues love the passion and spirituality of Violets and Lavenders. Whites and Blues have God and spirituality as a basis for incredible relationships.

It is important for a Blue to create a spirituality balanced life with a loving sensitive partner. Then they will live a peaceful, happy and contented life.

CAREER AND FINANCES

Emotional and spiritual values are far more important to Blues than money, and they play a much larger role in their lives than financial issues. Blues are careful with money and have a rather conservative approach to it. They need to make sure to cover all their expenses and needs, and they normally do not take financial risks.

Blues make excellent counselors and therapists. They are great listeners and can easily tune into the feelings and thoughts of others. They love to be of service to others, especially on a one-to-one basis. If Blues choose an occupation that does not offer opportunities to express these powerful qualities they possess, they will not be happy.

In the past, Blues may have been found predominately in private or social occupations or in their homes as mothers or housewives. In the last few decades, more opportunities have become available and many Blues have expanded their horizons, going into business careers. They are loyal, supportive and team-oriented. They lead with a strong team spirit and by their example. They show others that working together and creating a supportive environment allows a team to thrive, achieving amazing and powerful results.

Blues solve their challenges by staying calm and going within. They learn to listen to and trust their intuition, dealing with the situation from a place of self-empowerment. Because of their strong inner knowledge, Blues usually know what they should do. Their challenge is to take action and make changes. Letting go of old habits and patterns and openly embracing new situations is their test.

Blues usually need time to make choices. Their intuition allows them to make powerful decisions which are not only valuable for themselves, but to society in general. When Blues listen to their intuition and take action, they make tremendous growth and will expand their personal goal of self-love and self-nurturing to serve mankind.

Some Blue occupations are practitioner, caretaker, priest, nun, housewife, mother, child care worker, personal service, social worker, counselor, teacher, therapist, consultant, healer, secretary, accountant, personal manager and volunteer.

HEALTH, WELL-BEING AND GROWTH

To become truly centered, Blue personalities must learn to love themselves unconditionally. When they overcome their greatest fear, of being alone and not being loved, they can express their powerful feelings freely, living a meaningful and fulfilling life.

It is important for Blues to set boundaries and make clear decisions. They must learn to express their feelings, say, "No," when it is appropriate and when they need to honor themselves. Connecting with their personal power and then using it allows them to achieve goals and express even more love.

Blues need to create a peaceful and harmonious environment. They need to make willful decisions as to who they want to have as friends and what work environments are acceptable to their well being. They must learn to protect themselves.

Blues need a lot of time for themselves. They like being in a quiet atmosphere, listening to harmonious music or just sitting in a peaceful room. Being alone is empowering and allows them to go within. They love to visit churches or other spiritual power spots to recharge their inner battery and to give them the energy they need to find their purpose in life. Meditation and prayer are the most important and effective tools they can use to achieve inner peace and happiness. Being around like-minded spiritual people is essential.

Blues need to constantly be aware of their sensitive emotional body. Understanding their Mind/Body/Spirit relationship will help them to stay healthy and strong. Their mission is to first empower themselves through self love, and then to set a compelling example to all.
